

Ronald S. Whitehead, PMP

Associate of The Dayton Group

Specialized Skills: Contracting, Project and Program Management Instruction

Education: Master of Science, Management, George Washington University
BA in Political Science, The Citadel
Industrial College of the Armed Forces

Current: Support of TDG project management efforts. Senior contract instructor and adjunct assistant professor with Educational Services Institute (ESI) at George Washington University teaching and consulting in project management and leadership leading to a Master's Certification in project management from that institution. Highly acclaimed classroom style teaching internationally with major corporations and agencies.

Prior Experience:

Mid-West Region Manager, Vought Aircraft Company/LTV Aerospace and Defense Company (1986-1995). Responsible for the total operation of the Dayton office providing new business opportunity detection and contributed to business strategy development to win research and procurement competitions. Coordinated contract activities among Air Force, industry, and Vought project teams including the C-17 aircraft, manufacturing technology, and the Joint Primary Aircrew Training System

Program Manager, Airlift Systems, USAF Aeronautical Systems Division. (1977 - 1986) As a USAF Lieutenant Colonel, managed and led two major aircraft programs as program director, the AC-130U Gunship and the CV-22A Special Forces tilt-rotor aircraft, plus was a project manager on the C-17 and C-5B airlift aircraft. Experience in contract negotiations and agreements.

Program Staff Officer/Personnel Officer, various active duty USAF assignments. Served as a director of personnel in the Republic of China, Virginia, North Carolina, and Washington, D.C. Served as a project manager for the development of On The Job (OJT) training systems for the Air Force, he assisted in the formulation of the OJT methods still in use today.

Co-editor, Military Project Management Handbook, (1993). Cleland, Gallagher, Whitehead, McGraw-Hill, New York, NY.